

University of Colorado Boulder

PhD Consortium of Literatures and Cultures

Asian Languages and Civilizations

Classics

English

French and Italian

Germanic and Slavic Languages and Literatures

Spanish and Portuguese

The Consortium of PhD Programs in Literatures and Cultures is an innovative effort to maximize the benefits of intellectual and administrative collaboration while granting participating students autonomy in their pursuit of excellence within their chosen disciplines. We can offer graduate students funding and mentoring that allows them to complete their degree in five years without sacrificing intellectual depth and methodological diversity. Though students follow the curriculum of their home departments, they have full access to faculty in other departments, and will participate in joint workshops, speaker events, and digital humanities training. Summer stipends and internships will ensure that students' focus remains on their research projects and on their development as future teachers. CU Boulder's stunning campus will provide the fitting background for this intellectual journey.

HIGHLIGHTS

- 5 years of guaranteed support
- 1st year free of teaching
- Summer financial support
- Cross-departmental mentoring
- Speaker events, workshops, and seminars

For more information,
please contact:

Classics

Prof. Lauri Reitzammer
Associate Chair of Graduate Studies reitzammer@colorado.edu

Image credit (painting): Charles Partridge Adams, American (1858 – 1942), "Sunrise on the Mountains at the Head of Moraine Park, Near Estes Park, Colorado" (cropped), c. 1920, oil paint on canvas, 48 x 68 ¼ x 3 inches framed. Gift of Philip, Albert, and Charles P. Adams Jr., sons of the late Charles Partridge Adams, CU Art Museum, University of Colorado Boulder, 86.1825. Photo: Jeff Wells, © CU Art Museum, University of Colorado Boulder

Image credit (photograph): Glenn J. Asakawa,
© University of Colorado at Boulder

