

International Affairs MAJOR

Be inspired. Be involved. Be international.

Due to the growing interdependence of global society, the United States has seen an expansion of employment opportunities in government and international organizations, agencies, and businesses. Today there is a strong need for college graduates with a strong background in international affairs. The International Affairs Program (IAFS) at the University of Colorado Boulder fosters understanding of global issues and challenges through our interdisciplinary degree program.

About the IAFS Major

Through Geographic Concentrations, learn about a region of the world outside the United States, attain proficiency in a language of that region and become familiar with the region's cultural and political activities.

Learn about international affairs through courses in the four functional areas:

- Development and culture
- International economics, business, political economy
- Geography, international security, foreign policy
- International institutions, rights and norms

Our major requirements include interdisciplinary courses in anthropology, economics, geography, history, political science, languages, and many other departments across the college and campus.

Why International Affairs?

Interdisciplinary
IAFS Honors Program
Internships for Credit
Certificates
Study Abroad

International Affairs Program
UNIVERSITY OF COLORADO BOULDER

Visit our website at www.colorado.edu/iafs

