

Interested in the Environment?

PSCI 3064

Environmental Political Theory

Instructor: Professor Vanderheiden

When: Maymester - MTWThF 9-12

Where: DUAN G2B21

Examines the roles of ethical, social, and political norms in the understanding and evaluation of contemporary environmental issues and the conceptual framing of those issues within a variety of environmental discourses.

Explores how the construction of environmental goals or problems in terms affects the terms of their assessment, shaping the way that persons and social or political institutions are thought to properly address them.

Applies normative concepts such as justice, democracy, and citizenship to issues in environmental politics,

Discusses the roles that ethical, social, and political values play in major contemporary social movements,

